How is the data collected?

- Our collector stores data in an Amazon S3 bucket and in access logs temporarily on our server that are then migrated to Cloudwatch and deleted from our server.

- The data collected in our Amazon S3 bucket then gets progressively read (by default every 15 seconds), which inserts them in our Powster Insights database, which then aggregates every day for the Insights dashboard. This version of the data for the Insights dashboard is in a format that does not reveal any personally identifiable information.

- For performance purposes, this site also uses Google Analytics which is one of the most widespread and trusted analytics solutions on the web for helping us to understand how you use the site and ways that we can improve your experience. These cookies may track things such as how long you spend on the site and the pages that you visit so we can continue to produce engaging content. These cookies are only used as a second data source and they are not used as targeting cookies for advertising purposes.

For more information on Google Analytics cookies, see the official Google Analytics page or follow this link <https://support.google.com/analytics/answer/6366371?hl=en> .

- Powster Cookie: our partner drops a cookie for each session that expires within half hour. This cookie shows us how many users visited the site, for sessions and unique sessions inside our Insights tracking. This does not collect any personally identifiable information about the user and simply works by generating a random id that we store as a cookie for 30 minutes. It is used to track traffic and for security (to flag if our site is being repeatedly hit/attacked by the same user).
